ANNUAL REPORT 2015

Right Here. Right Now.

It isn't just a tagline.

It's a philosophy that pervades everything we do.

We are local people fighting a disease that affects our families, friends and neighbors.

100% of our funds and resources stay local and our partners are local businesses and organizations.

We are your local cancer organization, and we are Fighting Cancer ... *Right Here. Right Now.

Fighting Cancer ... Right Here. Right Now.

NETTIE JONES • Nettie Jones was scared. At 56 years old, she knew she was long overdue for her first mammogram, especially with two sisters and an aunt with breast cancer. But she didn't know where to go or how she could pay for it ... until the Cancer Coalition found her. Providing education, guidance and support, Coalition staff members eased Ms. Jones' fears and arranged for her mammogram at no cost. "Everyone at the Coalition made sure I was comfortable," says Ms. Jones. "I'm so thankful, and now I'm not afraid anymore."

BILLY BASS • It's hard enough to have cancer, but Billy Bass and his wife also were unemployed. To help with critical expenses, the Cancer Coalition provided financial assistance for groceries, and also for gas so Mr. Bass could travel to radiation treatments. Now cancer-free, he says, "It was a really rough time and I don't know what we would've done without the Cancer Coalition. Y'all gave us hope."

Serving Our Communities. Touching LOCAL Lives.

ROBIN WHITEHURST • Robin Whitehurst needed to have a colonoscopy, but she was terrified that "something bad will happen" and she kept cancelling it. Fortunately, her doctor referred her to the Cancer Coalition where a Health Navigator gave the 54-year-old the education and support, and assistance with gas costs, that she needed to finally have the procedure done. Afterwards, Ms. Whitehurst was relieved that two pre-cancerous polyps were removed. "What if I had waited?", she says, "What would have happened to me? People need to know the Cancer Coalition will help you, it exists to help people. Now I tell everyone about them."
